Suits pressed for plunder, Maguindanao massacre

By Philip C. Tubeza and Leila B. Salaverria

AS IF her troubles were not enough, former President and now Pampanga Rep. Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will be slapped today with a civil case for her alleged role in the gruesome Maguindanao massacre, a lawyer of the victims said yesterday.

Arroyo, who is under hospital arrest in Taguig City on charges of electoral sabotage, is also facing plunder charges in the Office of the Ombudsman. (See In The Know on Page A6.)

A lawmaker and two other complainants said that while Arroyo had been charged with electoral sabotage, there was still a need to make her accountable for alleged acts of corrup-

ISULAN, Sultan Kudarat—Like the memories of the grisly crime that shocked the world two years ago, the grief lingers for Maria Reynafe Momay-Castillo.

"Who would not?" she asked, caressing the lone clear photo of her father, Reynaldo Momay, a 61-year-old photojournalist of the weekly community paper Midland Review.

"When the body of your father is out there, never recovered, this will bring us misery, forever," she said.

A convoy of 58 people, including 32 media workers on their way to file candidacy papers for then Buluan Vice Mayor Esmael Mangudadatu to rival Andal Ampatuan Jr., scion of a family that has long dominated the strife-torn province of Maguindanao, was gunned down in an idle village far off the main road on Nov. 23, 2009.

Arroyo lawyers ask SC to declare panel illegal

By Marlon Ramos

LAWYERS yesterday asked the Supreme Court to act immediately on a petition to nullify as unconstitutional a special government panel that recommended the filing of election sabotage charges against former President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

The urgent petition on behalf of Arroyo, now a Pampanga representative who is under hospital arrest, was filed by lawyers of her husband, Jose Miguel "Mike" Arroyo.

Through his lawyer, Ferdinand Topacio, Mike Arroyo reiterated his previous claim in a petition earlier this month that the creation of the joint Commission on Elections-Department of Justice (Comelec-DOJ) panel that investigated the al-

THE PASAY CITY Regional Trial Court (RTC) hearing the electoral sabotage case against former President and now Pampanga Rep. Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has allowed her continued hospital arrest until it is determined whether she is fit to go to jail.

With no objection from prosecution lawyers of the Commission on Elections (Comelec), Judge Jesus Mupas of Pasay City RTC Branch 112 yesterday permitted Arroyo to remain confined at St. Luke's Medical Center in Taguig City.

PAF says bombers safe, may fly again

By Dona Z. Pazzibugan

THE PHILIPPINE Air Force's OV-10 Bronco bombers have been cleared to fly again 13 days after they were grounded following a crash in Zamboanga City.

PAF commanding general Lt. Gen. Oscar Rabena on Monday ordered the OV-10s placed back on operational status after an inspection found them to be airworthy.

The PAF grounded its remaining fleet of 12 OV-10s on Nov. 9 within hours of one of the twin-engine planes crashing in Edwin Andrews Air Base in Zamboanga City during a test flight.

The plane's right engine conked out and failed to restart, prompting an emergency landing. The two pilots were able to bail out seconds before the crash but they suffered injuries. The plane was a total wreck.

Brig. Gen. Rene [illegible], commander of the 15th Strike Wing, recommended the lifting of the grounding order after the planes passed a special inspection.

OPINION

A wider net

PRESIDENT AQUINO, returning from a conference of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations in Bali, said last Saturday that the fight against corruption and electoral sabotage had just begun in earnest.

He said that the filing of charges against former President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was just the start of the prosecution of those who had committed graft and corruption and electoral fraud in the past. And he rallied the people behind his administration's efforts to make the guilty accountable.

EDITORIAL

While Arroyo is the biggest fish that the Aquino administration is going after, the anti-corruption and anti-fraud effort should not be limited to her. The administration has to cast a huge and wide net, and go also after her accomplices and other minor officials who allegedly committed corrupt and fraudulent acts.

There is the case of former Justice Secretary Hernando Perez, who allegedly received a $14-million "commission" to approve the $470-million energy deal with Indonesian Mindanaoan Perusahaan (Sociedad Anonima) [illegible] in 2001, just four days after Arroyo took over the presidency. Whatever happened to this case?

There is the case of then Chairman Benjamin Abalos of the Commission on Elections who was found by the Supreme Court in 2004 to have committed "violations of law and glaring abuse of discretion" in awarding a billion-peso contract to Mega Pacific for the supply of automated counting machines. The Court ordered the government to determine which officials were involved and liable for the anomalous contract, but up to now nothing has been done and all those involved are scot-free.

Cheers for '80s stars

Text and photos by Pocholo Concepcion

THERE are two ways of looking at "80s80" ('80 to '80), a recent concert series at the Music Museum that looked back on the soundtrack of the 1980s generation of Pinoy youth.

First, as fun format. The show had a concept—the stage was dressed up as the 80s80 Music Bar, where patrons partake of "happy hour" drinks while watching a live gig.

The "front act," composed of a female vocal trio that doubled up as dancers later on, warmed up the audience with a medley of Toni Basil's "Street Beat" and "Hey Mickey" and B52's "Rock Lobster."

It sounded very upbeat and promising, but for a moment we wondered why the show's host, Franco Laurel, was made to rap the lines "Mr. Baby," on a taped recording of Vanilla Ice's "Ice Ice Baby"—a 1990s hit.

In any case, what followed was a quick sample of '80s Top 40 hits by the main performers: Juan Miguel Salvador showing off his punk New Wave attitude in Billy Idol's "White Wedding," Gino Padilla recreating the joys of teenage life in Wham!'s "Wake Me Up Before You Go-Go," Lou Bonnevie pumping energy into the imaginative lyrics of Nena's "99 Luftballons," Chad Borja interpreting the ambiguous charm in Spandau Ballet's "Gold," Ella May Saison sounding like the real Tina Turner in "What's Love Got To Do With It," and Jamie Rivera adding kitsch to Sheena Easton's "Telephone."

Everybody sang together in DeBarge's "Rhythm of the Night," sending out a message for the audience to "forget about their worries" for the next two hours.

Personal best

The next batch of songs spelled out the strengths of each performer: Borja excelled in ballads via Chicago's "Look Away," Salvador exuded rough charm in George Michael's "Faith" and Prince's "When Doves Cry," Padilla had an engaging pop appeal in Wham!'s "Careless Whisper," Bonnevie's raspy vocals shone in Kim Carnes' "Bette Davis Eyes," Saison's powerful pipes rang in Blondie's "Call Me," and Rivera played it cute with full costume in Olivia Newton-John's "Physical," and later on in The Bangles' "Walk Like an Egyptian."

The script also featured a number of movie theme songs, with the singers in matching costumes. Padilla looked cool in The Beach Boys' "Kokomo" and amusing in Ray Parker Jr.'s "Ghostbusters," but Rivera stole the spotlight by appearing again as Newton-John in "Xanadu."

It was during the OPM segment that we glimpsed the second factor through which the concert could be better appreciated.

The performers were made to reprise their respective hits: Rivera with "Hey, It's Me," Bonnevie, "Love Me Tonight," Padilla, "Gano Kita," Saison and Borja in a duet of "I Don't Love You Anymore"—which the latter said was an original by the New Minstrels, of which he was once a member.

Salvador was curiously left out, which could mean that he had no hit, either of his own or with his former band, Rage. Our memory fails now, but if this was true, there's something very disturbing about it.

The point is, Salvador—as well as the rest—are brimming with talent and obviously have
